

THE WASHINGTON POST

featured as one of its “Top Picks” the Bricco Dei Tati Barbera...the article was titled “Great Value: Recession Busters...”

“How often do we find a noteworthy barbera under $10? This is terrific for the price, with earthy cherry notes and a beautiful balance. Warning: This wine might persuade you to begin exploring the more expensive wines of Italy’s Piemonte region.”

The Washington Post

This is a young, fresh, lively Barbera with a persistent and attractive bouquet of black cherries and a bit of spice on the palate. It has few tannins, typical of Barbera wines, and a medium finish. Delightful and appealing; pairs great with medium to strong cheeses, barbecue and meat dishes.

dei Tati